Long

120 WORDS

Andrei Tone was born in Romania and built his career in Texas. He founded Tone Films in Dallas in 2018 with a camera and no clients, and has since directed work in twenty-eight cities across eleven states for more than two hundred brands and institutions, earning over 1,650 five-star client reviews. Two more companies followed: Tone Talent Agency, which represents talent across eleven divisions on a commission-only basis, and Atomic Accounting, which handles finance for individuals and companies. He studied ministry and leadership at Oral Roberts University, holds an MBA in finance from Liberty University, and is completing a PhD in organizational leadership at Dallas Baptist University. He still directs every project his company delivers and reads every inquiry himself, which is the subject of most of what he speaks about.

HOW TO INTRODUCE HIM

“He arrived from Romania with no network and no clients, and eight years later he owns three companies and still shows up on set himself. Please welcome Andrei Tone.”

THE TALKS

Three subjects, each drawn from running the businesses.

01

Trust Is Earned in Hours, Not Pitches

We asked our clients why they hired us. Nobody said the cameras. What they described was time: how fast we answered, how long we stayed, how little they had to chase. A practical talk on the unglamorous habits that win work and keep it, and why a small company can beat a large one on responsiveness long before it beats them on anything else.

FOUNDERS · SALES AND CLIENT TEAMS · AGENCIES

02

Starting From Zero in a Country That Was Not Yours

Andrei arrived with an accent, no network and no clients, and built three companies in eight years while working through an MBA in finance. What actually transfers when you have no head start, what does not, and why a reputation you had to manufacture from your own conduct turns out to be sturdier than one you inherit.

UNIVERSITIES · IMMIGRANT AND FIRST-GENERATION AUDIENCES · ENTREPRENEURSHIP PROGRAMMES

03

The Owner Should Still Be on Set

Every book tells you to work on the business, not in it. Andrei runs three companies and still directs every project himself. A candid look at what a leader should never delegate, what they must, and how to tell the two apart before the answer costs them their standard.

OWNER-OPERATORS · LEADERSHIP PROGRAMMES · BOARDS

ALSO AVAILABLE

Panels and fireside conversations on production, creative entrepreneurship, talent representation, and running multiple companies at once. Custom subjects considered where they overlap with the above.
